

E. C. Butler brought to town yesterday mornig three hogs which he had sold to the meat market and which was fine ones. They were Polan China stock and the three weighed 970 pounds. One of the hogs was a "whopper," weighing over 500 pounds, and all of them were fat and smooth. The hogs were all raised by Butler & Upton, and they realized a snug sum for them. They wintered on beets and fattened on barley and wheat screenings, at a trifling cost.—Hope Pioneer.
